

Project NO REST Human Trafficking Screening Tool (PNR-HTST) Instructions

This tool was developed to assist child- and youth-serving agencies to screen for possible youth victims of human trafficking.<sup>1</sup> The tool should only be used by staff members who have completed PNR-HTST training. Agencies that serve populations at risk of trafficking, such as runaway/homeless youth and youth involved in child welfare or juvenile justice, may choose to screen all youth served by the agency or screening may be triggered by reports of human trafficking from professionals or risk factors of trafficking.<sup>2</sup> The following risk factors have been identified, but may not be inclusive of all risk factors:

- History of running away or getting kicked out of home
  - Definition of running away or getting kicked out of home: Include times the youth did not voluntarily return within 24 hours, and include incidents not reported by or to law enforcement.
- History of homelessness or housing instability
- History of sexual abuse
- History of physical abuse
- History of sexual offense
- History of delinquent or reckless behavior (involvement with law enforcement or juvenile justice)
- History of neglect or basic needs not met
- Current or past involvement in the child welfare system
- History of alcohol or substance use disorder
- History of depression/mood disorder
- Exposure to domestic violence
- Family instability
- Excessive absences from school

<sup>1</sup> This tool is an adaptation of the Florida Human Trafficking Screening Tool originally developed by the Department of Children and Families and the Department of Juvenile Justice. Permission for use was obtained by Project NO REST.

<sup>2</sup> PNR-HTST is intended to complement and not replace agency policy and guidelines for working with potential victims of human trafficking. If you have questions about implementation of the tool in your agency, please contact PNR at project\_no\_rest@unc.edu.

To ensure that the instrument is administered effectively, all screeners should follow the screening protocol set forth in this guide. It is important for screeners to understand that questions designed to screen for human trafficking are invasive by nature and may reveal that a youth is suffering from the effects of exposure to trauma. As such, screeners must take care to create a safe environment in which they establish rapport and trust with the youth. Additionally, screeners should be prepared to call upon therapeutic and legal staff in responding to the needs of trafficking victims.

Youth may be reluctant to respond due to a lack of trust, fear of consequences related to disclosure, and/or not viewing themselves as a victim. Strengths-based, non-judgmental, and trauma-informed approaches should be used to engage youth in a conversation to secure answers to the questions within the instrument, rather than reading items verbatim. Motivational interviewing techniques may also be used to gently question inconsistencies and encourage disclosure. The guidelines that follow provide instruction for following the screening protocol for administering the PNR-HTST and should be adhered to each time a screening is conducted.

PNR-HTST Screening Protocol

SCREENING PREPARATION

The screening should be conducted in a safe and non-threatening environment. Screeners should be well-prepared, comfortable working with victims of trauma, and recognize the need to ask questions in an appropriate manner that is sensitive to the needs of youth. The following guidelines should be followed when preparing to conduct a PNR-HTST screening:

- Read through the entire screening instrument and this Administration Guide, so that you are familiar with the instrument and able to conduct the screening in a conversational style, allowing the youth to direct the flow of discussion.
- Conduct the screening in a private, quiet environment designed to make the youth feel physically comfortable and safe.
- Be prepared to provide the youth with basic needs such as an interpreter, tissues, drink, food, clothing, medical or therapeutic care, and/or access to services, as appropriate.
- If an interpreter is necessary, he/she should be trustworthy (unknown to the youth being interviewed) and able to use the same wording as the screener when asking questions and the same wording as the youth when answering questions. Use of an agency or certified interpreter is preferred, and interviewers need to offer such to the youth when possible. Interviews should be rescheduled if an interpreter is not available.
- Do not interview a youth in front of a suspected trafficker or individual who is exhibiting controlling behavior over the youth. Do not allow this person to interpret for the youth if he/she does not speak fluent English.
- Recognize that dressing in uniforms, suits, or other formal attire may cause a youth to fear that you are with immigration services or another enforcement agency.
- Use strengths-based and trauma-informed care approaches during the screening, allowing the youth to lead the direction of the conversation.
- The screening process may need to take place over multiple contact points if the screener judges that the youth needs more time. The screener may postpone the discussion to a later time when the youth is ready to discuss his/her experiences. When a youth displays acute signs of anxiety, the screener should consider contacting a trained mental health professional to complete a session with the youth.

The screening instrument contains a number of techniques used to help screeners administer the tool properly. Screeners should be familiar with these techniques which include the following:

- Instructions to screeners are provided in the PNR-HTST in italics throughout the instrument. These instructions guide screeners as to sub-questions that may need to be asked, sections that require information to be filled in, and questions that include prompts for further explanation.
- Introductory comments and questions to youth are in bold typeface. Introductory comments should be read to the youth. Screeners should use a conversational approach to secure answers to the PNR-HTST questions, being sensitive to the needs of youth who may be suffering from the effects of exposure to trauma.

- Screeners should use professional judgment in deciding whether to preface a question or a prompt with phrasing such as “Please tell me more about that” or “If you are comfortable, could you tell me about that?”
- Sections A, B, I, J, and K are preceded with the instruction (DO NOT READ TO YOUTH). These sections are intended to be completed by the screener and not asked of the youth.
- Please use the lines provided within the instrument to record youths’ responses to open-ended questions.
- At the end of selected questions you will see this symbol ➤ which asks that screeners code for the likelihood that the youth’s responses suggest any evidence of the problem targeted by the preceding item(s). An example is provided below:
  - Evidence of Unsafe Living Environment: (Check one) Yes _____ No _____
